The diagram features a central grey silhouette of a human figure. Ten lines radiate from the silhouette to ten rectangular text boxes arranged in two columns. Each box is connected to a specific part of the body: the top of the head, the face, the torso, the neck, the right arm, the left arm, the right hand, the left hand, the right leg, and the left leg. Each text box contains five horizontal lines for writing. The labels for each box are written vertically on a black tab at the top of the box.
